To the honorable the Board of Aldermen and the Board of Com-mon Connect of the city of Washington:

The joint select committee appointed to inquire into the practicability and experiency of creeding a new Centre Market House respectfully report that they have given the subject that consideration which its importance demands. The dilapidated range of structures known as the Centre Market has long been regarded as entirely unsuited to the wants and character of a community like ours; and public sentiment for years past has looked anxiously for the period when it would be superseded by another more in consonance with what is demanded allike die propriety. House is well calculated to create an unfavorable impres-sion, much to the prejudice of the city, in the minds of those who, by the constitution of the United States, are sion, much to the populize of the city, in the minds of those who, by the constitution of the United States, are vested with powers of exclusive jurisdiction over us, there can be no doubt; for it cannot be supposed that the members of the two houses of Congress who unite in appropriations of mosey for beautifying and adoming the metropolis can look with favor agon such a structure so prominently in view on the principal avenue.

Only a year since the proper officer of the government, the Commissioner of Public Buildings, in a report under to Congress, through the Secretary of the Interior, intimated a determination to remove it at once, unless the corporation anticipated him in the work.

This is his language: "Whilst upon the subject of the avenue, it may not be amiss to bring to your attention the great unisance the Centre Market-house is to it. The beauty of this great thoroughface of the city is much marred by the old and unsightly edifice, and during market days it not unfrequently happens that its free passage is obstructed by country wagens, which extend from 7th to 11th streets, and create so much filth and litter as to render the avenue a decided nuisance. Visitors to the city often express their surprise that such a market-house should be permitted to remain on the avenue; and the passage is to treate it or tender the avenue a decided nuisance. Visitors to the city often express their surprise that such a market-house should be permitted to remain on the avenue; and the city often express their surprise that such a market-house should be permitted to remain on the avenue; and the nuisance it creates is no uncommon complaint among the citizens. I believe it is perfectly competent for the gov-ernment to have the market removed, and unless proper measures should be adapted by the corporation of the city for the speedy abatement of the nuisance by the croction of a more suitable building, I would advise the erection of a more suitable building, I would advise the interposition of government authority to have the market-house removed." (See Senate Ex. Doc., 34th Congress, 2d session, vol. I, page 599.) The condition of things about the market has not sensibly improved since the date of the report, and there can be no doubt that, at the present moment, a very large majority of the citizens of Washington will feel gratified at the inception of measures looking to, and likely to result in, the erection of a new Centre market-house.

of a new Centre market-house. Several efforts, with this object in view, have been Several efforts, with this object in view, have been made within the last few years, but, from various cruses, have so far resulted in nothing. We do not propose to enter into these causes, as such an investigation would not tend to the determination of the question at the not tend to the determination of the question at the present time; but we proceed at once to suggestions which strike us as practical, and which, if acquiesced in by the two boards, will lead to positive results. It may be well questioned whether the site of the present structure, considering all things, is the one best calculated for the purpose. In the early history of the city, with a small population sparsely settled, and with the few large small population sparsely settled, and with the few large buildings of which the avenue could then boost, its loca-tion at that point could not be regarded as objectionable. But within ten or twelve years our city has taken rapid strides in all the elements of prosperity—in population, as well as the increased number, size, and character of its buildings. Nowhere has this improvement been more executible than an Pennsylvania avenue. Searcher a buildings. Nowhere has this improvement been more perceptible than on Pennsylvania avenue. Scarcely a vacual bot is to be found on either side of it between First and Fifteenth streets west, while many of the old structures formerly visible have given place to others, elegant in design, and magnificent in detail. In the mean time Congress has appropriated large sums for the purpose of paving, lighting, cleaning, and beautifying it, until it may not only be regarded as the principal avenue of the city—the avenue par excellence, and as likely to remain so for an indimite period—but it has assumed, and now presents, all the characteristics of a great international thoroughfare, for upon its broad and beautiful surface any be ordinarily found numerous representatives from every State, Terfor upon its broat and beautiful surface may be ordinarily found numerous representatives from every State, Torritory, and district of our own Union, as well as from almost all foreign nations. Under these circumstances, would it be judicious or advisable to commence a new structure for market purposes on Penusylvania avenue, or, if such a one was originated, is it not reasonable to presume that the government would interfere in some decided way to prevent its erection? Such, at least, is opinion of your committee; and, acting upon the riction, they have looked to another locality for the conviction, they have looked to another locality for the purpose. We are aware that private interests will, to some extent, be affected by the change; but in a great public improvement, such as is contemplated, the general good of the city and the permanent welfare of its people should ontweigh all such considerations. If private interests had been allowed to prevail, many improvements which have been accomplished within a short time would never have been effected; such, for instance, as the removal of the Western Market-house and the change of the railroad depot, both of which for a while caused obstructions and inconvenience on the arenue but nothing we propose, therefore, to place the new bulking at a point in view of, but not upon, Pennsylvania avenue; on a site which will oest the city nothing, and the use of which, we are confident, can be procured. We refer to Louisiana avenue, where it intesects the west line of With the confidence of the Ionisiana avenue, where it intersects the west line of Ninth street in close proximity to the present market, and along said avenue to Ohio avenue at Eleventh street, and thence up ohio avenue to Fifteenth street west. This space affords all the requisites for a market-house, suited to the wants of the city of Washington for an indefinite number of years. Probably the space on Louisiana avenue, between Ninth and Twelfth streets, would answer the purpose during the next twenty very conanswer the purpose during the next twenty years, containing, as it does, a superficial area of about 243,000 square feet, being nearly 100,000 square feet more than is contained in the present "Centre Market Space." That is the extent to which the committee propose to go at present in the erection of a building, leaving it to be extended ultimately to Fifteenth street, as the future extended ultimately to Fifteenth street, as the future wants of the community may require.

This brings us to the consideration of the style of structure to be creeked. Your committee are aware that some years ago a plan, known as Banlet's, was adopted by the city councils for a new Centre Market-house, but that seems to have been the linst attention given to the matter. The very magnificence of the project, and the immense expenditure incident to it, probably did as much to defeat the proposition for a new market at that time as anything else which could have been unintentionally devised. In style it compared favorably with many of devised. In style it compared favorably with many of the public buildings erected by government for national purposes, while the extravagant calculations in regard to the revenue to be derived from it did not strike the community of the communi

Believing that the crection of such a building, or of any building on a magnificent scale for market purposes, is impracticable, inexpedient, and impolitic, we recommend one of a plain and substantial character, conforming generally in style and finish to the Western Market House, and without indis himself at length at the feet of the charming widow, and also elected to Congress. The pliant politician was finely delineated by Mr. Hanly, and Mrs. Proctor acquittering the public convenience, and at the same time promoting essentially the interests of the city; for there can be no doubt but that the increased rents of these forces would more than compensate for any additional outlay in so arranging them. Upon this point, however, the committee are not entirely decided, leaving if for more full and mature deliberation and discussion in the boards. The cost of such a building as only absolute, and Mrs. Proctor acquitted hereased rents of these forces would more than compensate for any additional outlay in so arranging them. Upon this point, however, the committee are not entirely decided, leaving if for more full and mature deliberation and discussion in the boards. The cost of such a building as of the city point, however, the committee are not entirely also as forced to such a purposition of the force of the manner of the compensation of the composition of the public convenience, and at the performances will appear as Sir Anthony Absolute, and Mrs. Paying will appear as Sir Anthony Absolute, and Mrs. Taylenre takes the character of Lydin Languish. The performances will conclude with the farce, "My Precious Betsy."

We have so a manufacture of the compensation of the composition of the boards. The cost of such a building as of the city Hall-the most central and eligible position in the city.

of course, being made for the additional story indispensable for police purposes. This amount can be paid by the city without extraordinary effort, the revenues of the markets themselves affording the means to a great extent with which to liquidate it. The income from the centre market is now near $11,000, and by energy and good management could be made considerably larger.

By setting these apart, to be devoted inviolably to the purpose, your committee are of opinion that at present no other financial recourse will be necessary or advisable. We have thus presented as a sit is possible to do within the scope of a written report, a full and precise idea of our plan for a new centre market-house, combining, as we think, the elements of economy and practicability. By commencing with this plan at the point first indicated near 9th street, and completing the section extending to 10th atrect, the necessity of removing all the old market buildings at one time, and the consequent great public inconvenience which would follow, will be avoided.

With the completion and occupancy of the first section of the new market would follow the abandonment and demolition of a portion of the old, and so on, in regular progression, until the whole would be removed. Your committee do not propose to enter into the questions connected with the legal ownership of the ground on which the present market is situated, further than to express the confidence that it will eventually and assuredly become the undisputed property of the city, to be disposed of in a manner best calculated to subserve its general interests. Without taking into consideration the legal rights which we have acquired by more than half a century of actual possession, the liberality of Congress has been too often manifested in our behalf to entertain a doubt on the subject.

We report a joint resolution instructing the proper com-doubt on the subject.

We report a joint resolution instructing the proper committee to give attention to the matter at the next meeting of Congress. And, in accordance with the leave given as under the resolution by virtue of which we are acting, we also respectfully report a bill for the erection of a new centre market house.

THE PRESIDENT'S MOUNTED GUARD

This popular corps, under the command of Capt. Peck, elebrated the anniversary of the surrender of Lord Cornwallis at Yorktown by a grand parade yesterday. They were attended by Esputa's band, which discoursed stirring strains of martial music, and proceeded to the residence of Quartermaster Edward Towers, on Indiana avenue, where the event of the day was to come off in the presentation of a splendid flag to the company. The flag has been heretofore described in our columns as the gift of some ladies, who desired in this manner to testify the high appreciation in which this company is held by them. The Mounted Guard, having reached the spot, wer formed into line, and dismounted and marched on to the sidewalk. Miss Towers then came out on the steps, and spoke as follows :

Captain Peck, Officers, and Men: The ladies, friends Captain Peck, Officers, and Men: The ladies, friends of the President's Mounted Guard, being desirous of maniesting their high regard for you as gentlemen and soldiers, have deputized me to present you with this beautiful flag as a token of their respect and acknowledgment for the many pleasant associations connected with your admirably-conducted balls and excursions in which it has been their lot to participate. Allow me to say, gentlemen, in behalf of the ladies, that you have their best wishes for your prosperity, and that your corps may have many more added to it, whose privilege it shall be to rally around those bright stars and broad stripes; and long, long may they wave

"O'er the land of the free and the home of the brave." The band then played the "Towers Polka," which was emposed by J. Esputa expressly for this occasion. Capt. Peck, in receiving the flag, returned thanks in behalf of the company as follows:

the company as follows:

Ladies: Nothing can be more flattering or better calculated to inspire the military man with ardor in the discharge of his duties than to have the countenance and approbation of the ladies: and on this occasion we feel more than of his duties than to have the countenance and approbation of the ladies; and on this occasion we feel more than complimented. We feel convinced by this beautiful token of your regard that we have your kindest wishes for our welfare, prosperity, and perpetuity as a company; and we, as citizen soldiers, return you our warmest thanks for this flag, the emblem of liberty. In accepting your gift allow me to assure you that the members of the President's Mounted Guard heartily respond to your acntiment in wishing that it may long wave over a free and ident's Mounted Guard heartily respond to your acuti-ment in wishing that it may long wave over a free and united country; and permit me also to say that as long as these stars and stripes continue to wave in defence of liberty and equal rights, we will defend this flag against all in-vasions, whether of a foreign fee or caused by mob vio-

Capt. P. delivered the flag into the charge of Ensign J. T. Essex, who received it with a few appropriate remarks. Miss Peck then presented the company with a beautiful wreath of flowers, in the following words:

Mr. Cornet, I have the honor of presenting this wreath as a token of the regard which I cherish for the wreath as a token of the regard which I cherish for the members of this bandsome corps. These flowers are em-blematic of our fate—to-day fair and bright, to-morrow they wither and fade away. My carnest wish is that you all, unlike these flowers, may be arrayed, in a perpetual bloom, to be transplanted into the Paradise above.

Esputa's band then played "Paradise Waltz," composed and arranged by their leader; after which the company, together with the invited guests, entered the J W Sever, Virginia Junes N Davis, Maywille, Ky parlor of Mr. Towers, where a bountiful repast had been spread for them by Mrs. T., of which they partook with a hearty zest. Brief speeches were made by Colonel Hickey and Richard Wallach, esq., and the healths of the fair hostess and her daughter were the rairroar depot, both of which for a while caused obstructions and inconvenience on the avenue, but nothing in comparison with that which is felt and is inseparable from the present Centre Market. Other instances might be adduced did a necessity for it exist; but the principle is too clear and just for either argument or illustration. We propose, therefore, to place the new building at a point in view of, but not upon Pennsylvania avenue; in this way the Mounted Guard were once more formed to the propose, therefore, to place the new building at a point in view of, but not upon Pennsylvania avenue. in this way the Mounted Guard were once more formed into line, and proceeded to the navy-yard. On their return they paid a visit to the residence of the commanding officer of the regiment, Col. Hickey, who received them with a soldier's welcome, and invited them in, where refreshments were provided. Several toasts were drank, and brief speeches were made on this occasion. where refreshments were provided. Several toasts were drank, and brief speeches were made on this occasion, of which we have not room to attempt a more extended notice. Suffice it to say that, after a hearty interchange of good feeling, the company resumed their parade, and in the evening visited the theatre in a body, attended by their band; after which they serenaded the President, the Secretary of War, Major Bacon, Col. Hickey, and Quartermaster Towers, and at a late hour were dismissed.

A Noverry,-We had the plasure of listening to an explanation, on Monday last, of a new mode of imparting instruction in dancing, invented by Professor H. Krouse, who has been teaching with much success in California and some of the Atlantic cities, and comes here with excellent testimonials as to his ability. This system appears to be founded upon mathematical and scientific principles, and to be worthy of public attention. The theory is that as there are seven notes in the musical scale, by the various combinations of which all kinds of harmonies are made, so there are seven steps which compose all kinds of dances; and each of these steps is repsented by a character, so that in a few lessons the puresented by a character, so that in a few lessons the pu-munity as at all practical or likely to be realized. This plan lies buried among the archives of the city—a me-mento of the public spirit of those who adopted it, and at the same time of their wisdom in not attempting to execute it. method of teaching dancing; and he is about forming classes in which the practical advantages of his invention carry in style and finish to the Western Market House, and without any superstructure except so far as may be necessary for carrying out the police regulations of the city. This can best be done by placing on a portion of the central section of the building an additional story, designed and calculated for a police station, and to be surpmonted with an alarm bell. To accommodate the large sentation of Mark Mayberry, the wealthy merchant, who, and increasing trade now temperated at the market in WASHINGTON THEATRE .- Last night the comedy of "Exand increasing trade now transacted at the market in goods, wares, and merchandise other than market stuffs, the ground floor of this portion might be subdivided into small dop received the charming widow, and also elected to Congress. Whether they were at any other places during this time we know not, but can only say that Esputa had forty-six musicians engaged yesterday in various places. Vive

Account. -- Yesterday afternoon a horse became fright ened on the avenue, and ran up as far as Fourteent street with a beggy. In his progress he ran against a lady by the name of Turner, residing on D street, between Fourteenth and Fifteenth streets, knocking her down and bruising here severely, but it is believed that no bones were broken. Mrs. T. had a child in her arms,

Tax Payens should remember that if their taxes are paid before the first of November, they will save five per cent. on the several amounts. As there is always a rush at the office during the last few days, our citizens will consult their own convenience by walking up to the collector's office and settling without delay.

THE FUNERAL of Mrs. Maher was attended yesterday aftermoon by a large number of sympathizing friends. She was long a zealous and warm friend of the Franklin Fire Company, and during the procession the flag of the company was displayed at half-mast and the bell was tolled in respect to her memory.
